CCRKBA last month endorsed S. 816, the proposed Personal Safety and Community Protection Act introduced by Sen. Larry E. Craig of Idaho, a CCRKBA Congressional Advisor and CCRKBA Gun Rights Defender of the Month Awardee.

S. 816, a companion measure to H.R. 339, by Rep. Clifford B. Stearns of Florida, also a CCRKBA Gun Rights Defender of the Month Awardee, would enable a citizen who has a permit to carry a concealed firearm issued by any state to carry that gun in any state.

S. 816 has been referred to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary and H. R. 339 has been referred to the House Committee on the Judiciary.

"We welcome most heartily Sen. Craig's introduction of S. 816," said John Michael Snyder, CCRKBA Public Affairs Director. "The right to self-defense, and the correlative right to the means necessary for self-defense, are of paramount importance in this day and age.

"On one side of this perennial issue are the defenders of the right to self-defense and, by implication, the right to life itself. Exemplifying this are Sen. Craig and other supporters of the right of law-abiding citizens to carry concealed firearms for self-defense.

"On the other side of the issue are the enemies of self-defense. These include Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg of New Jersey, the sponsor of S. 707, which would outlaw generally the carrying of concealed firearms, and other supporters of such legislation.

"The battle for the right to self-defense, for the right to defend life itself, as symbolized by the battle between supporters of S. 816 on the right side and supporters of S. 707 on the wrong side, is being waged not only in the halls of Congress but also in the media and in national, state and local political and legislative activities.

"This is a battle for the future, a struggle to maintain the traditional proposition that the individual is superior to the state and that the state, in fact, is a creation of the individuals who comprise it. Individuals, conversely, are not subjects of the state, regardless of the unfortunate views of Lautenberg and others.

"If CCRKBA Members and Supporters wish to help in this struggle, they could contact their U. S. Senators and ask them to become cosponsors of S. 816."

In the House of Representatives, where H. R. 339, the companion to S. 816, had been introduced earlier this year, the measure now has over 10 percent of the House on its cosponsor list.

These H. R. 339 cosponsors include Reps. Robert B. Aderholt of Alabama, Spencer Bauchus of Alabama, James Barcia of Michigan, Bob Barr of Georgia, Roscoe Bartlett of Maryland, Ed Bryant of Tennessee, Jim Bunning of Kentucky, Barbara Cubin of Wyoming, Jo Ann H. Emerson of Missouri, John Ensign of Nevada, Terry Everett of Alabama, Jon D. Fox of Pennsylvania, Virgil H. Goode, Jr. of Virginia, Ralph Hall of Texas, James V. Hansen of Utah, Richard "Doc" Hastings of Washington, J. D. Hayworth of Arizona, Van Hilleary of Tennessee, Earl Hilliard of Alabama, Tim Holden of Pennsylvania, John N. Hostettler of Indiana, Asa Hutchinson of Arkansas, Ray LaHood of Illinois, Ron Lewis of Kentucky, David McIntosh of Indiana, Mike McIntyre of North Carolina, John P. Murtha of Pennsylvania, Sue Myrick of North Carolina, Bob Ney of Ohio, Charles Norwood of Georgia, John E. Peterson of Pennsylvania, Charles "Chip" Pickering, Jr. of Mississippi, Nick J. Rahall II of West Virginia, Bob Riley of Alabama, Max A. Sandlin of Texas, Pete Sessions of Texas, Adam Smith of Washington, Mark Souder of Indiana, Floyd Spence of South Carolina, Bob Stump of Arizona, Gene Taylor of Mississippi, Jim Turner of Texas, Wes W. Watkins of Oklahoma, Roger Wicker of Mississippi and Don Young of Alaska.

"If your U.S. Representative's name does not appear on this honor roll," said Snyder, "you might consider contacting him or her and asking him or her to become a cosponsor of H. R. 339."

When Sen. Craig introduced S. 816, the companion to H. R. 339, he stated "I rise to introduce the Personal Safety and Community Protection Act.

"In recent years, a movement has swept the Nation to enable individuals to carry concealed firearms for their protection. Forty-two of the 50 States have some right-to-carry permit mechanism in place, and they are finding these laws make a significant impact on crime.

"The benefits of right-to-carry laws were verified by a landmark study released late last year. Following a comprehensive analysis of annual FBI crime statistics from all the Nation's counties, over 15 years, the authors concluded:

"Allowing citizens to carry concealed weapons deters violent crimes and it appears to produce no increase in accidental death or suicides. If those States which did not have right-to-carry concealed gun provisions had adopted them in 1992, approximately 1,800 murders and over 3,000 rapes would have been avoided yearly..."

"The primary author of the study, John R. Lott, Jr. of the University of Chicago Law School, has pointed out that the benefits of concealed-carry laws are not limited to those who carry the weapons but extend to their fellow citizens as well. The drop in crime is not necessarily the result of using firearms in self-defense, but of criminals changing their behavior to avoid coming into direct contact with a person who might have a gun - which in a concealed-carry State could extend to a wide cross-section of the public.

"The legislation I am introducing today builds on the experience of the States. It is designed to protect the rights of citizens no matter where they may travel in the United States, and to enhance the protection of our communities.

"This bill applies to any person holding a valid concealed firearm carrying permit or license issued by a State, and who is not prohibited from carrying a firearm under Federal law.

"In States that issue concealed carry permits, the individual would be able to carry a concealed firearm in accordance with State laws. In States that do not have right-to-carry laws, the bill sets a reasonable, bright-line Federal standard that would permit carrying except in certain designated places, such as police stations, courthouses, public polling places, meetings of State, county or municipal governing bodies, schools, and passenger areas of airports.

"The second part of the bill provides an exemption for certain qualified current and former law enforcement officers, who bear valid written identification of their status, from laws prohibiting the carrying of concealed firearms. The bill does not override any existing training requirements or restrictions on gun ownership or use by current or former law enforcement officers. The individuals covered by this section of the bill have proven records of responsible, lawful gun use in defense of their fellow citizens and communities.

"Again, this portion of the bill takes a practical, experience-based approach to self defense and community protection.

"I'm pleased to note that my bill is a companion to H. R. 339, introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Cliff Stearns and cosponsored by more than 40 Members from nearly half the States.

"I urge all my colleagues to join us in protecting the rights of your constituents

CCRKBA REPORT ON CHILD SAFETY ISSUE

As the hot and humid summer weather began its descent on Washington, D. C., political forces in the Nation's Capital were posturing on the issue of firearms ownership and child safety.

As part of that posturing, President Clinton announced last month he is using his executive power to create rules he says are designed to prevent firearms from coming into the possession of minors.

Under the new Clinton rules, gun dealers will be required to post signs and distribute written warnings to each gun purchaser stating that it is a felony to sell or give the gun to a minor.

Clinton's directive ordered Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin to publish the regulation in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

The new rules, to be implemented by BATF, do not change the law or stiffen penalties. Under Clinton's order, the Nation's 112,000 federally licensed firearms dealers will be required to distribute materials to all gun purchasers telling them that:

- it is generally a violation of federal law for any adult to transfer a handgun to a minor or for a minor to possess a handgun;

- violators will be vigorously prosecuted;

- violations are punishable by up to five years in prison;

- handguns are a leading cause of juvenile fatalities; and

- firearms should be safely stored and have locking devices to prevent accidental discharge.

It is expected the Clinton rules will affect about 3.5 million handgun sales each year.

In May, the U. S. House of Representatives passed a bill which would authorize more adult trials for juveniles accused of violent crimes and drug offenses.

Clinton and many of his congressional supporters said the House-passed juvenile justice bill is inadequate because it does not mandate the inclusion of triggerlocks with the sale of certain firearms.

As this issue of POINT BLANK went to press, the U. S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary was poised to consider the juvenile justice, criminal gang legislation.

Senate sources informed POINT BLANK it is expected that Sen. Herbert H. Kohl of Wisconsin, a Clinton ally, will attempt to amend the House-passed bill with a Clinton proposal mandating trigger locks in connection with certain gun sales.

At that point, according to sources, a "compromise" proposal mandating that dealers "make available" for sale a number of different kinds of safety devices when certain firearms are sold probably would be offered. This "compromise" proposal probably will include a provision that if dealers actually sell the safety devices in this connection they will not be subject to legal liability.

Other proposals, of course, also could be offered. Stay tuned.

ANTI-HANDGUN ACTION IN TWO MAJOR STATES

Supporters of the individual right to keep and bear arms must be alert to anti-handgun activity in major states on both the East and West Coasts. "In both California and Massachusetts," said Ken Jacobson, CCRKBA Executive Director, "the gun grabbers are on the move."

In Massachusetts, the Attorney General, Scott Harshberger, a candidate for next year's Democrat nomination for Governor, is on the warpath against handguns.

He's out to mandate "consumer protection regulations" in a blatant attempt to impose gun control without going through the legislature.

The Harshberger proposals would:

- require "tamper-resistant" serial numbers on all handguns sold in the state;

- prohibit the sale of handguns that have a melting point of less than 900 degrees Fahrenheit; are composed of any material having an ultimate tensile strength of less than 55,000 pounds per square inch; are composed of any powdered metal having a density of less than 7.5 grams per cubic centimeter; have a "defect" that makes them prone to accidental discharge, a history of repeated detonation based on a single pull of the trigger or explosion of handgun; fail to comply with the suggested chamber pressure standards or other handgun tolerances of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers Institute; or have a barrel less than three inches;

- prohibit the sale of handguns without childproofing or safety devices such as trigger locks, solenoid self-limitation devices and other devices which effectively preclude a child under the age of six from firing the gun; and

- require that any handgun sold be accompanied by the following warning: "WARNING: This handgun is not equipped with a device that fully blocks use by unauthorized users. ... Failure to take reasonable preventive steps may result in innocent lives being lost, and may result in your liability for such deaths."

In California, the Senate and the Assembly each passed anti-handgun bills.

The two bills differ somewhat and it is far from certain that the differences will be reconciled or that, if they are, the legislative end product will be signed into law by Governor Pete Wilson.

U. S. Sen. Barbara Boxer of California, the sponsor of S. 70, a so-called "junk gun" bill, speaking last month on the floor of the U. S. Senate, reported "the California State Assembly and the California Senate passed legislation to prohibit the manufacture and sale of junk guns in California.

"California has taken the lead in a nationwide movement to get these guns off our streets. Thirty-two cities and counties have enacted local ordinances banning junk guns within their

John Michael Snyder, CCRKBA Public Affairs Director, presented a Glock-19, 9mm Semiautomatic Double Action (Safe Action) Pistol to Deputy Jason Hendrix of the San Bernardino, California Sheriff's Department during the May 15 National Police Memorial Day Commemorative Luncheon in Miami, Florida.

Snyder made the presentation on behalf of CCRKBA, the Second Amendment Foundation (SAF), of which he is Treasurer, and Glock, Inc., of Smyrna, Georgia, which donated the sidearm specially for the occasion.

Glock, through the good offices of Paul Jannuzzo, Vice President and General Counsel, donated the handgun at the suggestion of Joseph P. Tartaro, SAF President.

Snyder also presented Deputy Hendrix with the CCRKBA Distinguished Police Service Award, an attractively engraved plaque.

The annual event is cosponsored by the American Police Hall of Fame and Museum, which named Hendrix the 1997

Law Enforcement Officer of the Year, the National Association of Chiefs of Police (NACOP), and the American Federation of Police and Concerned Citizens (AFPCC). Snyder is NACOP Vice President for Public Affairs and AFPCC National Vice President for Public Relations.

While off duty at a shopping center on March 30, 1996, Deputy Hendrix observed a suspect with a firearm in front of a crowded store holding two employees hostage. He told his fiancée to call 911. He then went to the rescue of a man and woman being held at gunpoint. The subject told the man that he was going "to kill him." Deputy Hendrix knew that he must act to save the lives of others.

Outside of the store where there was a clear area, Deputy Hendrix identified himself, holding out his badge and gun. He yelled clearly that he was an officer. He called upon the subject to release the hostages and surrender.

The subject, at that moment being surprised by Deputy Hendrix, released the hostages, who turned out to be the subject's estranged wife and another store employee.

Deputy Hendrix then waited until he had a clear field of fire to confront the armed man. As he continued to call for the subject's surrender, the armed criminal fired a total of 15 rounds, striking Deputy Hendrix six times. Even as he was hit, Deputy Hendrix was able to fire a total of five rounds, striking the subject with all rounds, but not fatally. The subject was able to bend over the wounded officer to fire again. He tried to escape with his ex-wife as hostage. Finally, the wounded subject was so weak from his wounds he was overcome by another off-duty officer and store employees. Responding officers took him into custody.

Remarkably courageous in a situation where other lives might have been lost, and keeping the tradition of the law enforcement profession, Deputy Hendrix disregarded his own safety and his own wounds to end a life-or-death confrontation where dozens of innocent bystanders were at risk.

"His courage in placing his life on the line testifies to his gallantry," proclaims the American Police Hall of Fame Certificate naming Deputy Hendrix Law Enforcement Officer of the Year, "and sets an example to our Nation of the integrity of the law enforcement profession."

Ken Jacobson, CCRKBA Executive Director, and James Kielland, CCRKBA Grass Roots Coordinator, arranged for the presentation of the CCRKBA Distinguished Police Service Award. It states CCRKBA "is honored to present this award to Deputy Jason Hendrix who has, by exemplary action, sustained the high level of devotion to duty, above and beyond the normal call of police service."

Snyder, President of the St. Gabriel Possenti Society, Inc., presented Hendrix with one of the Society's Medallions, featuring an image of Possenti flanked by silhouettes of a lizard and a handgun, and surrounded by appropriate lettering.

Possenti was the Italian seminarian who single-handedly rescued the village of Isola from a band of 20 terrorists in 1859 with a striking, one-shot, lizard-slaying demonstration of handgun marksmanship. He died in 1862. Pope Benedict XV canonized him in 1920.

The international, interdenominational Society promotes public recognition of Possenti, including his Vatican designation as Patron of Handgunners. It emphasizes study and exposition of the historical, philosophical and theological bases for the doctrine of legitimate self-defense.

Snyder also presented a Society Medallion to Richard Jewell, who saved the lives of countless people by helping to evacuate Centennial Olympic Park in Atlanta, Georgia on July 27, 1996 after spotting a suspicious package that contained a bomb.

The American Police Hall of Fame honored Jewell for the manner in which he handled accusations that he himself was the bomber. Last October, the FBI finally cleared him.

Jewell, according to the Associated Press, said the recognition eases, but does not erase, the sting of three months under the "microscope" of the FBI and "hordes of journalists."

Jewell, unemployed and still searching for a job in police work, reportedly has settled a lawsuit against NBC for $500,000 and also settled with CNN for an undisclosed amount. He has a lawsuit pending against THE ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION, and has signed a movie deal with Rupert Murdoch's 20th Century Fox for rights to his story.

Speakers at the May 15 Police Commemorative Luncheon included Donna Shepherd, Event Coordinator and Executive Director of NACOP and AFPCC, Morton Feldman, Executive Vice President of NACOP, Chief Dennis Ray Martin, President of the American Police Hall of Fame, George Vuilleumier, President of NACOP, and Officer Joseph McCaffrey, President of AFPCC. Police Chaplain Jack Rinchich gave the invocation. Carl Paschal, Minister of the South Dade Christian Church, gave the benediction. Craig

ARICO OF VIRGINIA THE CCRKBA AWARDEE

Dan Arico of Fairfax, Virginia is the designated recipient of the CCRKBA Gun Rights Defender of the Month Award for July.

In nominating Arico for the Award, John Michael Snyder, CCRKBA Public Affairs Director, said "I have known Dan personally for over 25 years. He is deeply committed to the individual right of law-abiding American citizens to keep and bear arms.

"I am recommending him specifically for this Award because of his contribution to the legitimate promotion of the shooting sports among youth. This promotion is a way of insuring that the right to keep and bear arms is valued and honored over the long haul.

"These days, a number of active Second Amendment supporters bemoan what they term the 'gradual disappearance' of opportunities for the youth of America to become acquainted with the discipline and joys of the shooting sports. They say sometimes that this situation can lead to a future situation in which there will be little or no public support for the Second Amendment because there will be so few people actually familiar with the legitimate use of firearms.

"To people like this, Dan Arico and others like him could serve as an example of what can be done to prevent this eventuality from occurring."

An avid promoter of the Boy Scouts of America (BSA), Dan Arico organized the First Annual George Washington District Rifle Match, held in Northern Virginia, just this past spring. Hosted by the Northern Virginia Gun Club, this was the first BSA shooting activity over and above the BSA's famed merit badges program.

An NRA certified coach's trainer, Arico informs POINT BLANK that support for the match was so great that plans call for an expanded regional match for Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia later this year.

"It is my hope," he says, "that this program will help to dispel some of the anti-gun propaganda that these kids are getting in the schools and from the media. It certainly has helped in teaching them that the shooting sports can be fun!"

Dan says he hopes that the idea catches on even more and spreads across the eastern seaboard as well as throughout other sections of the United States.

Arico says it's important for the youth of America to become familiar with the shooting sports as a means of preserving our Second Amendment rights.

"The right of self-defense is the most fundamental human right," states Arico. "All other rights are dependent on it. No property rights, no religious freedom, no privacy is possible without the ability to remain secure in your own person."

Dan was born on November 3, 1946 in Elizabeth, Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh.

After receiving a Bachelor of Science in Chemistry from Duquesne University in 1970, he worked for about five years for Oxygen Emergency Supply in Elizabeth.

He moved to the Washington, D. C. area in 1975, becoming Eastern Service Manager of the Monaghan Company, a respiratory therapy equipment concern, where he worked for about five years.

In 1979, Dan, who has taken a number of computer courses at George Mason University and also at Northern Virginia Community College, founded Arico Systems, a computer services company specializing in mailing lists, process surveys and direct mail. Dan and his wife, the former Sue Marshner, continue to run the company.

Dan and Sue have three children, Joe, 15, Steve, 14, and Theresa, seven. Needless to say, the three are all shooters. They are members of the Acorns Junior Rifle Club, in conjunction with which the two boys are involved in small bore rifle shooting. In the spring George Washington District Rifle Match, Joe Arico took first place and Steve second. Theresa recently received her NRA junior marksman qualification in prone position.

Dan says his first experience with shooting came in the Cub Scouts. He eventually became an Eagle Scout and later a Cub Scout Den Leader when his oldest son joined the Cub Scouts.

Dan says he moved on to become Assistant Scoutmaster and "started the troop rifle team five years ago using air guns at an indoor range I built in the rafters of my warehouse." He also taught shooting at Boy Scout summer camp.

Arico has been active in CCRKBA and

QUICK SHOTS

"There are many more accidents in the home from other causes than firearms. Is there proposed legislation to require bathrooms to have hold handles on all the walls, or padded walls, floors and bathtubs? What about accidents related to bicycles, skateboards and skiing?"

"A lot more people are killed and harmed in motor accidents than firearm accidents. Do we need more motor vehicle laws to save more lives? Probably not. Behavior that leads to harming people - DWI, speeding, reckless and aggressive driving, driving without a permit - is already unlawful.

"And do we need more regulations regarding firearms? Again, probably not. Other than self-defense, harming or threatening another person with a firearm is unlawful, as is (in Maryland) the possession of a loaded firearm outside of a home or authorized hunting or target-shooting area.

"As for the location of firearm stores, we can look at our neighbors in Washington, D. C. where there are none. We all know that Washington, D. C. prohibits ownership of handguns, yet it has one of the highest firearm shooting and death rates in the country. With few exceptions, if any, this awful destruction is caused by people who intend to inflict harm and have acquired their weapons unlawfully.

"As for trigger locks, their effectiveness is in dispute. They seem just as likely to give a false sense of security as to protect against accidents. Is there any data?"

"All the proposed legislation will only punish responsible, safety-conscious, legal firearms owners.

"So how can the government protect the community? Perhaps with more harsh penalties, more strict enforcement, more efficient courts, more and better education.

"All sides of gun-issues arguments would like to do away with gun violence. Let's find ways to objectively study the problem and come up with substantive solutions based on logic rather than emotions."

In London, England last month, lawmakers voted overwhelmingly to pass a bill outlawing all handguns, apparently signaling the end of pistol ownership in Britain.

The Firearms Bill passed the House of Commons by a vote of 384 to 181. Because of the new Labor Government's solid 179-seat majority, the bill's passage through two more stages in the House of Commons seems assured.

"It will in general no longer be possible to practice handgun sports in the mainland of Britain," said Home Secretary Jack Straw, although the country occasionally will host world shooting events.

Prime Minister Tony Blair has thrown his support behind the bill. Once through the House of Commons, the bill will be debated by the House of Lords, Parliament's unelected upper chamber. If approved there, the legislation will be presented to Queen Elizabeth II to be signed into law.

The bill extends the ban that the government of former Prime Minister John Major passed through Parliament in November. That bill did not outlaw .22 caliber handguns, though it said they could be kept only at gun clubs.

"All the law does is lock up the gun and remove your right to self-defense," THE WASHINGTON POST quoted Alan M. Gottlieb, CCRKBA Chairman, as commenting. "It's a scapegoat. It picks on gun owners who don't break any laws."

According to a recent survey conducted by America's Research Group, shoppers say for the fourth consecutive year they have less fear of crime while they shop. Since 1994, reports the Group, there's been more than a 72 percent increase in the number of consumers who carry some type of "protective device," including firearms. The survey noted that over half of all Americans believe Americans should be allowed to carry "concealed weapons."

In Woodbridge, Virginia, D. R. Covey is upset with U. S. Sen Herb Kohl of Wisconsin for wanting to mandate "child safety locks."

He states "people don't need a federal law to keep their kids out of the street and away from matches. Why can't it be the parents' responsibility to teach their kids not to play with guns?"

"Mr. Kohl should go back to appropriating and leave my guns alone. Or he should focus on passing laws requiring judges to put people in jail for breaking the laws we already have."

In Sacramento, California, pro-gun forces are watching anxiously legislative developments regarding A. B. 136, which would repeal the state preemption of local firearms laws.

In Kensington, Maryland, Berle Cherney is complaining about proposed local legislation dealing with location of firearms stores, admission to people under 18, transportation of firearms and trigger locks.

The proposals have been made by the Montgomery County Council and by County Executive Douglas M. Duncan.

"Is the proposed legislation based on substantive research," asks Cherney, "or is it driven by well-meaning but otherwise nonrational emotion? Responsible firearms owners could be penalized, while the community gains nothing.

"Where does the government's responsibility to protect begin and end?"
